"In a quiet, festive corner of our city, where Christmas lights twinkle and children's laughter fills the air, An elderly woman, Mrs. Sharma, watches the children playing under a brightly decorated Christmas tree.

Mrs. Sharma calls out to a group of parents nearby. Cheryl looks up. Her son, Ryan, is scratching his legs

Residents approach Raju and find out that he is holding a fake spray bottle labeled "Weed Killer." Mrs. Sharma pulls out her phone to take a picture of Raj with the fake spray.

Residents approach the complex's management office with Raju. Mrs. Sharma shows the picture of Raju's fake spray bottle to Mr. Verma.

Raju! We were in the contract with your facility team for reliable and responsible service. How could you do this?

Sir, I swear this was not my take. I was only doing what I was asked for!

I will contact Mr. Karan and will take legal action regarding this fraud.

Mr. Karan received a call at the Locawa Apartment and was astonished to find everyone present.

I know you all are very angry, but the weeds are not much of a problem. I will make sure to get rid of them all.

The little kids are involved in this! Do you have any idea how serious this is?

That's it! We're terminating the contract immediately and suing you.

Residents gather near a Christmas tree in the garden, discussing the issue. Mr. Verma addresses them

Gables & Facility Services has been skimming the money. We've hired a reliable service now.

Thank you, Mrs. Sharma. You've saved our children!

A responsible gardening service company is now properly managing the apartment complex garden. The weeds have vanished, and the children are once again happily playing

MORAL OF THE STORY :

Fraud in the name of maintenance can harm more than just the garden. Always check what's under the surface.
