TechSphere Solutions, a thriving IT firm, contracted with NiceOne Facility Services for office maintenance.

NiceOne is well-regarded. They guarantee frequent HVAC system cleaning and air quality monitoring. Our employees' health depends on that.

Absolutely! We've experienced allergy concerns, so our employees must feel comfortable.

Six Month Later Employees start to notice unusual odors in the office, and staff members complain of coughing, sore throats, and headaches.

Something's Wrong in the office. People are getting sick, and the air is stale.

Don't worry, I'll investigate this thoroughly

Rina called Tsphere Solutions Health & Safety Officer Dr. Meera Patel to investigate the mystery

These symptoms align with exposure to mold spores. We need to check the HVAC system.

During inspection, they shockingly found large colonies of black mold due to prolonged neglect in cleaning and maintenance.

This growing mold is the source of the problem. Prolonged exposure to black mold can cause serious health issues.

How could this happen? We trusted NiceOne, they assured us regular cleaning.

Clearly, they are not following the cleaning schedule. This is a serious violation of health and safety standards.

Rajeev and Rina arrange a meeting with Vikram Saini, the Facility Manager at NiceOne Facility Services.

Despite NiceOne's promises, the damage is done. Multiple employees have sought medical assistance, and some are on long-term sick leave.

After consulting with their legal team and health professionals, Tsphere Solutions decides to terminate their contract with NiceOne Facility Services.

Rajeev and Rina swiftly approach a trusted facility service provider that specializes in HVAC and safety inspections.

MORAL OF THE STORY :

Neglecting facility maintenance, especially HVAC cleaning, can be fatal. Air quality control and duct cleaning are about health and safety, not just comfort. When shortcuts are taken, the risks are far higher than anticipated, affecting both employees and business operations.
